CHARLESTON.—The Mercury of the 3d says:

One hundred shots were fired yesterday by Battery Gregg against Fort Sumter. Sullivan's Island replied, throwing eleven shots at Gregg.

From 8 a. m. up to 6 p. m. there were thirty-nine shells fired at the city.

There will be a suspension of hostilities this forenoon, during the exchange of prisoners, which has been fixed to take place to-day. The prisoners now in our hands, fifty in number, including the five Yankee Brigadiers, will leave Chisholm's Mill Wharf at 8 a. m. in a flag of truce steamer, and be taken down the harbor, beyond Fort Sumter, where it is understood they will be met by a Yankee steamer, with our prisoners aboard. The exchange will then take place with the least possible delay, under the superintendence of Col. John F. Lay, Inspector General, and Captain Geyer, the Provost Marshal.

Among the negro prisoners taken at Petersburg a number of the slaves of gentlemen of that city and vicinity have been recognized.—What is to be done with the scoundrels?

RAILROAD VARIETY BILLS.—The Richmond Whig says:

A letter to the editor from an officer of Early's army dated "Camp near Martinsburg, July 29th, 1864," says: "We are now engaged in tearing up the track and burning the bridges of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad."

Peace in Ninety Days.

We learn that in a speech made by Governor Vance on Thursday night, to a crowd of citizens who called on him, he promised peace in ninety days. We do not know upon what the Governor bases his calculations, but as he is the confidential friend of Mr. Davis and makes the declaration after the election we suppose he must be in possession of some facts not known to the public. We do not know what kind of peace the Governor refers to, but we think we can square the public that no peace can consider up within the short space of ninety days save as the result of unconditional submission. And we will add that if the Governor and his friends are ready for peace upon such terms we are not. We tell the people now, as we have often told them before, that the war cannot come to an end until one party or the other is exhausted; unless it be based upon our plan of negotiation and compromise. No man can conscientiously predict peace as the result of recognition and independence at the end of ninety days from this writing.

In the election of Vance the people of North Carolina [illegible] a radical war policy, and as long as [illegible] the city Union to which the contest [illegible] we believe to entitled to suppose that it will not be long before those who have voted for war will have a chance to demonstrate their devotion to the cause upon the trusted field.

"Only Twelve Hundred!"

Such was the modest language of the telegraph announcing the sack of Saturday last at Petersburg. Only twelve hundred more have been "killed, wounded and missing," only twelve hundred more fighters plunged in mourning, and not more, perhaps, than five thousand hearts lacerated by the fatal announcement of "our loss only twelve hundred." Not a family—only the springing of a mine—and yet twelve hundred of the brave veterans of the Army of Northern Virginia are missing as well said. Mr. Davis says his coffee in Richmond, Mr. Lincoln cracks his jokes in Washington, and yet the twelve hundred will come not again. The whistling, booming, giddy public boy and girl and street Cadet prefer and demand yet further exertions, and still the stricken wife, the weeping children and the sorrowing mother who feel a personal interest in the "twelve hundred" watch for their coming in vain.—Twelve hundred in the springing of a mine, a hundred or two in a picket skirmish and five to ten thousand in a pitched battle; and so on from year to year this monstrous war continues to strip us of our harvest and best and yet the demons of destruction hound on the dogs of war.

How long, oh how long shall doting mothers weep for their children and find them not!—Twelve hundred gone in a skirmish, and yet we do not see the beginning of the end. The people want peace but the hearts of the rulers are bent upon blood and carnage. No wonder that the land is clad in the habiliments of mourning. "Only twelve hundred!"

Where is Grant?

Is Grant dead or is he not? and if not dead where is he? Since the report of his death was put in circulation, we do not remember to have seen anything in the shape of official disposition from him or his name even mentioned in the Northern papers. Has he gone to Georgia, to Washington or somewhere else, and was the report of his death put out to deceive our authorities. We should not be at all surprised to hear at any time that Grant is directing the movements of the Federal army in Georgia, in person. If Grant is not dead we wish he'd let us know it, and if he is dead why don't he say so.

Waring on Women and Children.

The telegraph informs us of the killing of two ladies and a child by shells in Atlanta, and doubtless others have been maimed and crippled by those Union restorers, who are so anxious to extend their protection to the "whole world and the balance of mankind." How the sanctimonious Puritans of the North must rejoice at such progress in civilization! They may rejoice and chuckle now, but impartial history will hold them up to posterity as the destroyers of their race.—No other government professing civilization has ever made war on women and children.

We are glad to be able to state that the election passed off quietly in this city on Thursday. Those of the county candidates who were in town worked hard during the coverings, each electioneering for himself, and their friends were not idle, but there was no fighting nor did we hear any angry words even. We trust that the same good behavior prevailed throughout the State.

[illegible] that there are traitors in high places in this city. [illegible] and hope they will be speedily [illegible]. The Examiner says:

There can be no longer room to doubt that we have traitors in some of our high places. The assignment of Gen. Jos. E. Johnston to the command of our armies in Northern Virginia, and the removal to that quarter of a large body of his veteran troops, was but known in this city beyond the circle of the intimate of the War office. Yet we see the whole of our plans, as regards our campaign of invasion, spread before the world in the columns of the New York Herald. It behooves the authorities to probe this matter to the bottom, and discover and punish the traitor.

We have no doubt but Bennett's gold unlocks all the important secrets of our government and that between the means of frustrating some of the best plans of our Generals. It is very well known that the "detectives" of the various departments at Richmond, including the war office, are men of desperate character, generally gamblers, pugilists and the like. Cases that occasionally come before the Police Court, one of them no longer ago than last week, prove this. But who is to blame for all this and who is to reform existing abuses? We don't know.

Unless the returns to come in from the army shall change the result, Gen. Fowle has beaten Mr. Richardson a few votes in the Commons, but the fact that Mr. Richardson led his ticket here in Raleigh, where he is best known, is an evidence of the high estimation in which he is held. There is much that we might say to show why the result might have been, and probably ought to have been, different, but as the discussion of such matters, now, could have no good effect, we forbear. Mr. Richardson has received a flattering vote and one of which any gentleman might well be proud.

PEACE IN THIRTY DAYS.—We learn that Gen. Fowle, in his speeches in the late canvass, spoke in the most sanguine terms of an early peace—spoke of the bow of peace visible in the heavens and predicted peace with independence in thirty days. Now if peace does not come by the first of September the General must excuse us should we remind him that he is a false prophet. We tell the people there is no honorable peace for us, this month, this year, or next year, save it come by submission and compromise. We should not conquer a peace, we even, even were all the original secessionists to go to the field, in thirty or even ninety days. Mark what we say.

NORTHERN NEWS.

The Herald of the 1st says:

General Grant has been digging and delving to some purpose. The mine of which the Richmond journals have been talking about in somewhat disdainful terms for some time past was completed in front of the Ninth corps (Burnside's) on Friday evening, fully charged with six tons of powder, and exploded under the enemy's breastworks, scattering the earth and the garrison far and wide into the air, including, it is believing, sixteen guns which were in battery. An immediate assault was made into the gap then created. Our artillery and musketry from the Ninth, Fifth and Eighteenth corps along the whole line opened a tremendous fire, and a desperate engagement commenced, in which, it is reported three lines of the enemy's breastworks were taken. Latest official news received in Washington last night affords no result of the conflict. The facts above stated are all that is positively known.

Our correspondent with the 9th corps gives a most minute description of the plan and working of the mine, which was undertaken and completed by Colonel Pleasants, of the 48th Pennsylvania regiment, composed mostly of coal miners from the Schuylkill district men well accustomed to this kind of work. The work was commenced on the 25th of June, and was thus exactly a month in progress. It was done with so much secrecy that other corps around knew nothing definite about it, although, as we have known for some time, the rebels were acquainted with the fact that General Grant was mining in some direction. Prisoners taken state that the enemy were undermining our works, and that in two or three days they would have the mines under us. General Grant and General Meade witnessed the explosion and the assault. It is said that our troops having to cross an open field in the charge, suffered severely. It may be some days yet before Petersburg falls before the successful assaults of Gen. Grant. At Vicksburg in June, 1863, one rebel fort was blown up, and the enemy's works were assaulted, but line after line of strong defences were found, and would have had to be reduced in succession if the city had not surrendered. But an interval of nine days elapsed between the explosion of the mine on the 20th of June and the capitulation of Vicksburg. If a like result should accrue at Petersburg we ought to be satisfied.

THE DESTRUCTION OF CHAMBERSBURG.

A telegram dated Harrisburg, 31st ult., gives the following highly colored account of the burning of Chambersburg:

General McClausland was in command of the rebel troops when they burned Chambersburg. He is a desperate and ferocious freebooter, ready any time to violate the usages of honorable warfare, in order to gratify his dark and malignant passions. After he had taken formal possession of the town, he made a proclamation demanding $100,000 in gold. It was, of course, impossible to comply with such a demand, no doubt made in confident expectation of its failure, and as sure of its affording a pretext to execute the premeditated plan for destroying Chambersburg.

The valuable portion of the merchandise having been removed, added to the rage and disappointment of the rebels, and, when thus inspired, the order was issued to fire the court house, the three bank and bank buildings. A strong breeze [illegible] Speedily the scene became heart-rending and most appalling. The crackling and roaring of the flames as they leaped from house to house, the shrieks of terrified women and panic-stricken and suffering children, the pitiful appeals of the old and helpless, were heard above the noise of the conflagration, but all to no avail. The citizens had, without protesting, submitted to the plundering of the stores, but only appealed to the mercy of the foe, but nothing could appease the butcher and incendiary of McClausland.

Two-hundred and sixty-five of the most valuable and prominent public and private buildings have been destroyed. They first one blew, as near as can now be ascertained, at 11 o'clock A. M., and remained just long enough to see the flames spread and get proper headway when the alarm was given that Averill was approaching the town. Instantly every freebooter was in his saddle, and took the road hurriedly to St. Thomas, with Gen. Averill in pursuit.

PETERSBURG.

[From the Express of Wednesday.]

FROM THIS FRONT.

Nothing whatever of interest had occurred on our lines up to 8 o'clock last night. The usual picket firing and mortar shelling took place, but these have now become of such common occurrence, as to fail to attract attention.

Some persons whose imaginations have been doubtless much quickened by the events of Saturday last, state that the enemy are still mining, and give as a reason therefor, that they can see them bringing the dirt from their "saps," and depositing it in the rear. The general impression seems to be, that the enemy had but one, and that they expected greater results from that than they have realized. It was manifestly to their advantage, and they knew it as well as we, to have sprung all their mines simultaneously, if they had more than one. There are but few points along the lines where mining operations can be successfully conducted, and two of these has been already tried. We think, therefore, that this mode of warfare, is about at an end with Grant.

ANOTHER PLAN OF RETREAT.

A Yankee officer who accidentally got into our lines Monday morning, during the cessation of hostilities, was returned yesterday under flag of truce. His name, we learn, was Hopkins, and his rank that of Colonel. We think it could have been a good idea, to have kept him in rebel company for a while, as a slight punishment for his indiscretion.

THE LOSSES ON SATURDAY.

The enemy freely confess to a loss of 4000 from all causes, in the fight of Saturday. Finding the flag of truce Monday, sundry Yankee officers closely shaven, rigged in full uniform, and donning spotless white kid gloves, came out on the neutral ground, and with all the vanity of a peacock, strutted boldly around. Among others, a General Ferrero, well known in New York city, as a coxcomb and dancing master. Gen Ferrero, commanded a Brigade of negro troops. He acknowledged that he brought over 2200 ebony soldiers, and that but 900 returned to the Yankee lines unhurt. If this dancing masters statement be true, as it doubtless is, the gentlemen of African scent, must have suffered heavily. During Saturday and Sunday nights, the enemy availed himself of the darkness to remove many of the severely wounded near his line of entrenchments, but notwithstanding this stealthy movement, many still remained Monday morning, who had laid there since Saturday, beneath a broiling July sun, and famishing for water and food.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS.

Some one has said that in moral subjects first thoughts are often the best, because formed prior to the calculations of selfishness. They may not, however, always be the best; for they may proceed from passion, which, in fallen man, is as spontaneous and quite as quick as any moral impulse. As a general rule, neither the first nor the second thoughts are the best, but the last thoughts of a studious course of reflection in which both first and second thoughts are reviewed—that which is good in each being preserved, and that which is evil rejected.

The same remark holds good of the exercises of the intellect. The first views of the truth are frequently the freshest and the justest. It has been remarked that the first view of the newborn infant discloses a resemblance to a father or mother which the subsequent growth of the child effaces; and there is often a similar power of penetration in the first glance of the intellectual eye, directed towards a truth presented for the first time: the prominent features are then caught on the instant and correspondences are detected which disappear on a more familiar acquaintance, being lost sight of among other qualities. But while these original glimpses are often very precious, and are to be carefully noted and registered, it is equally true that first impressions often contain a large admixture of error. At these times of intense rapture and ardent longing the mind seizes eagerly on what presents itself, and is incapable of drawing distinctions, and may utterly neglect other aspects which are only to be detected by longer and more familiar acquaintance. Hence the need of cool reflection to come after, and retain only what can be justified by the rules of logic. As the first looks of the infant reveal features which are subsequently lost sight of, so the last look of the dying will call up once more lineaments which had escaped our notice in the interval. Let there be a similar holding of all the true analogies caught in the first look, in those last looks, which, after many a survey, we cherish and retain forever of the objects which excite our interest and claim our regard.

MARRIAGE TOO EXPENSIVE TO BE POSSIBLE.—A Paris letter writer tells the following. I was in a circle a few days back composed of both native French and newly arrived Parisians. At last the conversation turned upon the Emperor, and the last arrivals were full of fearsome stories of attempts upon the Emperor's life. One "story" ran as follows: A beautiful young Italian girl was requested to make him a drink, which she did. As if accidentally, in receiving the goblet, he overturned its contents into it a small knife with which he had been playing, broke out. The knife almost immediately turned black from the presence of some poison which the Italian had dropped into the beverage, probably as a "flavor," like our quietly spat back to the Orleanian tribe, through the teeth, disgusted.

Another dainty, offered Napoleon the largest piece of an apple, which she cut neither in two, and while in conversation with him. (She was French, and a privileged member of the household.) With true politeness, he requested an exchange, he to eat the smaller piece, and she the other. The lady desperately who could not eat so much. He eating both pieces and leaving retired. The next day the [illegible] commented on "waste her sympathies on the dessert-ate" of a servant, whose she can reflect that the very first trouble which arose in the world, in the year one, came from Eve offering Adam an apple not fit for his gentleman at that time.

A New York weekly paper remarks: For a gentleman to speculate in Wall street, at present, is just as foolish as to play euchre against three Western blacklegs, with a Confederate standing behind your chair and telegraphing what you have in your hand. Do you understand that?

Noonan, the daughter of Enoch, was five hundred and eight years old when she was married. Gammage, indeed!

Headquarters Army Northern Va.,
CAVALRY BUREAU, July 29, 1864.

BRIG. GEN. WESLEY MERRITT, COMMANDING Brigade of Cavalry, Army Northern Virginia, is hereby authorized to take possession of all cavalry, arms, equipments and accoutrements in the hands of civilians or other unauthorized persons in the State of North Carolina, which he is satisfied that such arms, &c., are legitimately the property of the Confederate States. All arms, &c., dropped by our troops or the enemy on their lines of march, or on battle fields, or left or sold by officers or soldiers on entering not in the military service, are the property of the Confederate States. No person in the military service has a right to sell or otherwise dispose of arms &c., except where under the orders and regulations of the Ordnance Department.

Gen. Merritt will not delegate this authority to any one except commissioned officers of his own command, who will be furnished with a copy of this authority, and with instructions to furnish receipts to parties from whom arms, &c., are taken under its provisions.

By command of Gen. R. E. Lee.

(Signed) BRIGO G. BALDWIN,
Asst. Colonel and Chief Ordnance Officer,
A. N. V.

Under this authority I desire especially to gather up McClellan saddles. These saddles were conveyed from the army. There can be no private property in them. Parties keeping and others have no right to sell them except to the government, which pays fixed prices for the articles.

This brigade is much in need of good saddles. Many of their men have are ruining the horses' backs. The men are losing largely and the service suffering severely by these saddles being withheld from it, often obstructed by subalterns. I appeal to all patriots to come forward and voluntarily give them up to the officers and men of this brigade in their respective localities, who will receive for them. Those now at home, and especially all on horse details, are required to gather up these saddles, also Sharp's rifles, Colt's repeaters, and other cavalry arms and equipments, the property of the Confederate States, and bring them back into the service. All reasonable expenses incurred in this way will be repaid them.

I claim no right at present either to seize or impress such arms and equipments; but I confidently expect every honest man, not in the field, to give them. They ought to be ashamed, in a time like this to be seen with them.
